Craig Siemsen has been described as a leading midwest guitarist with a voice that is a mixture of honey and grit. His songwriting speaks to the human condition with poetry and humor. The combination of these two artists creates a sound that is full-on spark and joy.

Described as an acoustically good marriage, Patty and Craig were individually 'out there' enjoying their music, when, in the mid-1980s, they met while performing at a folk festival. For many years, Patty and Craig maintained solo careers, even after they married. Eventually, with the prodding of wise friends, they agreed to perform one show as a duo. The rest, as they say, is history.

Their recordings have been listed as DJ favorites and have received international airplay. Their 2015 release, Paint Me a Picture, was one of the top played folk CDs. With their daughter in college, Patty and Craig are returning to touring, performing original songs, as well as their own variations on timeless pieces that often span the ages of creativity in sound.
